Introduction

This is the 2013/14 edition of the annual register of the British Psychoanalytic Council (BPC). It is designed to be used by those looking for psychotherapeutic help, and by psychotherapists and health care professionals seeking to make referrals.

The BPC is an association of member institutions that are training organisations, professional associations and accrediting bodies which have their roots in psychoanalysis and analytical psychology. They bring together more than 1400 psychoanalytic and psychodynamic psychotherapists (including psychoanalysts, Jungian analysts, child psychotherapists, and couple psychoanalytic psychotherapists) who as individuals become registrants of the BPC. Our member institutions are listed in Section 5.

Our registrants work across the public, voluntary and private practice sectors; many are senior clinicians in the core mental health professions and make important contributions to research in this field.

What the register is

Our annual register is a register of those practitioners who meet our fitness to practise standards. Promoting professional standards and acting as a voluntary regulator of the profession is a key role of the BPC. This is especially important in the absence of statutory regulation of the profession. A Government report published in July 2006, The regulation of the non-medical healthcare professions, states that the function of a regulator is to:

- Set and promote the standards that all in the profession should meet
- Publish a register of all those who meet these standards
- Ensure that everyone on the register continues to meet the standards (through periodic checks and procedures for resolving concerns/complaints).

The BPC accredits the trainings of its member institutions, ensuring that they meet our published training standards. An individual who qualifies from one of these trainings is then eligible for entry into the BPC's register. BPC registration then continues to be governed by a range of fitness to practise requirements:

- The therapist must be a member of good standing of their own professional institution (which is a member institution of the BPC)
- They subscribe to and are governed by the BPC's published Code of Ethics
- They are regulated by the BPC's Complaints Procedure
- They must maintain an annual programme of continuing professional development (CPD), monitored and approved by the BPC, which includes consultation on their clinical work, attending lectures and courses and a broad range of professional activity.

The detailed fitness to practise policies are all published on our website or are available from the BPC office. Failure to meet these requirements will mean that the practitioner's registration will be suspended or terminated. Our over-riding priority is to protect the public and maintain public confidence in the profession we regulate.

The BPC's Complaints Procedure came into force in April 2007, replacing the individual complaints procedures of the BPC's member institutions.

Psychoanalytic/dynamic psychotherapy

Psychoanalytic or psychodynamic psychotherapy is a therapeutic process which aims to help people with distressing psychological situations and mental health problems. The process helps a person to understand these complex, and often unconsciously based, emotional and relationship problems. This can enhance their ability to manage their own feelings, their life, and their dealings with others, and by doing so can reduce symptoms and alleviate distress. Psychoanalytic and psychodynamic psychotherapy create a setting in which it is possible for a person to experience and reflect on their difficulties as these manifest themselves in the relationship with the therapist which develops during the process of treatment.

This form of therapy is not limited to dealing with what can be thought of as mental health problems. Many people who experience a loss of meaning at certain points in their lives or are seeking a greater sense of fulfilment can be helped by this approach.

For further information, our website (www.pschoanalytic-council.org) has a section describing psychoanalytic / psychodynamic psychotherapy.

Looking for a psychotherapist

If someone feels they need psychotherapeutic help, they may wish to get some professional advice on their treatment of choice. In the first instance, this may be their GP. Alternatively, they may find it useful to have an initial consultation with a psychotherapist who would be able to advise on the best approach. Most of our member institutions operate a referral service. Details of these are contained in Section 6, which also has information on reduced fee schemes for those with limited means.

If they decide that psychoanalytic or psychodynamic psychotherapy is the right choice for them, they can either contact a therapist directly (using this register or the Find a Therapist section of our website) or go through a referral service. The Find a Therapist section of the website will contain the latest updated information, including whether the therapist is still a BPC registrant in good standing.

The BPC office is happy to talk to members of the public who are seeking further information.

Further information on psychotherapy

The BPC has published, in collaboration with Mind, an informative booklet entitled 'Making sense of psychotherapy and psychoanalysis'. This is available on the BPC website (<http://tinyurl.com/BPC-Mind>), or can be purchased from us.

The Department of Health publishes a useful guide called Choosing Talking Therapies. This is available to download at <http://tinyurl.com/DHbrochure>

Another helpful brochure is called We need to talk: the case for psychological therapy on the NHS, published by the Mental Health Foundation (available on their website at <http://www.mentalhealth.org.uk/publications/we-need-to-talk-report/> or call their publications order line on 020 7803 1101).

Definitions of our categories of registrants

(in alphabetical order)

Jungian Analyst (Analytical Psychologist)

Trained to work very intensively (4 or 5 times weekly), generally with the patient lying on the couch. Most of the work is with interpretations and uses the relationship between patient and analyst as the focus. The theory base is psychoanalytic including Jungian.

Medical Psychodynamic Psychotherapist

Doctors who are also trained to work once or twice weekly, generally with the patient/client seated on a chair. Some of the work is with interpretations (making the unconscious part of the mind conscious) and uses the relationship between patient and therapist as the focus, but there is also a focus on everyday life and outside experiences. The theory base is psychoanalytic.

Deferred registrants

Alphabetical list of deferred registrants.

This list is of those qualified psychoanalytic or psychodynamic psychotherapists who are not currently registered for independent clinical practice by virtue of the fact that their work is not regulated by the BPC, but who are currently of good standing and would be eligible to be fully registered if they met the required standard of Continuing Professional Development. Deferred Registrants are bound by the BPC's Code of Ethics, and remain subject to the BPC's Complaints Procedure. The Code of Ethics, which applies to all Member Institutions, requires that clinical practice must be undertaken in a regulated setting such as the NHS or under overseas registration.

Founded in 1988 as a professional association for couple psychoanalytic psychotherapists in the UK and overseas and affiliated to the Tavistock Centre for Couple Relationships.

The British Society of Couple Psychotherapists and Counsellors aims to promote the understanding of couple relationships from a psychoanalytic perspective and to develop psychoanalytically informed work with couples. It does this through providing training and professional support for its own members and other practitioners working in related fields, and through holding events that aim to engage the wider community in thinking about couple relationships.

Finding a Therapist

The British Psychoanalytic Council receives many enquiries about how to find a therapist and the following suggestions may be of assistance. It can often be helpful to take the advice of psychiatrists, general practitioners, clinical psychologists, social workers, nurses and other health care professionals when seeking a referral for psychoanalytic or psychodynamic psychotherapy. Several member institutes of the British Psychoanalytic Council have referral services which can assist in finding a therapist and some also have clinical services offering therapy or analysis at reduced fees. Services of this kind are listed below. Information is provided under four sections:

2: Reduced Fee Schemes for Adults	page 158
3: Referral and Reduced Fee Schemes for Children & Adolescents	page 160
4: Referral Services for Couples	page 162

Section 1: Referral Services for Adults

Referral services for Adults provided by the member organisations of the British Psychoanalytic Council are listed below. Some offer an initial consultation and assessment after which an appropriate referral is made. Further details of the service offered may be obtained by applying as indicated.

Information for registrants

Code of Ethics
Continuing Professional Development Policy
Clinical Trustees

Code of Ethics

Registrants are expected to act with honesty and integrity in all their professional work and have a responsibility to be familiar with, and abide by this Code of Ethics.

This code sets out the essential ethical imperative and a breach of any of this code may constitute grave misconduct which will be treated with the utmost seriousness and dealt with accordingly.

1. Registrants must at all times act in a way that they reasonably believe to be in the best interests of their patients. At all times the welfare of the patient must be paramount and every care taken to ensure that the patient is not exploited in any way.
2. Registrants must take all reasonable steps to preserve the confidentiality of information acquired through their practice and protect the privacy of individuals and organisations about whom information is held.
3. Registrants must conduct themselves and their professional activities in such a way that does not damage the interests of their patients or participants in their training.
4. If a member is convicted of a criminal offence in any court in the UK, or elsewhere, or has any proceedings commenced against him, civil or criminal, or has proceedings commenced against him by any professional body, he must inform the Chair of the Ethics Committee of the BPC. Similarly, registrants have a duty to inform the Chair of the BPC Ethics Committee of such information pertaining to a fellow registrant.
5. Registrants may not resign from the BPC (or from their constituent institution) while they are under investigation for an ethical complaint. Any such resignation will not be accepted by the BPC and the constituent institution. A registrant under investigation must undertake not to impede the process of investigation.
6. Registrants have a duty to maintain a satisfactory standard of professional competence by meeting the appropriate requirements for CPD and undertaking any necessary further education or training.
7. Registrants must restrict their practice within the limits of their own competence and seek professional consultation or supervision in any situation which may reach this limit. As a matter of good practice, registrants should exercise clinical judgement in considering whether to seek a medical opinion about a patient.
8. Registrants must, at the beginning of treatment, make clear to the patient, or whoever holds legal parental responsibility for a child in treatment, the principles and practicalities of the treatment offered and assure that as far as possibly they are maintained.
9. Registrants shall take all reasonable steps to ensure that those working under their direct supervision adhere to this code and do not attempt to practise beyond their competence.

10. Registrants must convey the Terms and Conditions of practice at the outset of therapy, so that the patient or whoever has legal parental responsibility for a child can understand the nature of the treatment and agree to it.
11. Registrants should be familiar with the Access to Health Records Act of 1991 and the Data Protection Act and their implications for practising psychotherapists. Registrants must refer to the BPC guidelines on Notes and Records if requests for access to notes or records occur.
12. Registrants must limit their work, or refrain from practice when their physical or psychological health is seriously impaired or if in doubt about their ability to perform competently must seek appropriate advice.
13. Registrants must carry out their duties in a professional and ethical way and maintain appropriate and professional boundaries with patients at all times, so that they are not exploited in any way.
14. Registrants shall, in all their professional work value integrity, impartiality and respect for patients and seek to establish the highest ethical and clinical standards in their work.
15. If advertising, registrants shall confine such advertising to a statement of name, relevant qualifications, address, telephone number and a brief statement of the service offered. Such statements must be descriptive and not evaluative.
16. Registrants must conduct themselves in such a manner as not to bring the profession, colleagues or themselves into disrepute, and must maintain fitting levels of respect and courtesy with colleagues and members of their own and other professions and with their employer if employed and also with the public.
17. If publishing or presenting clinical or supervisory material either orally, written or film/video form, registrants must make every effort to ensure the anonymity of patients and where clinically appropriate seek the patient's permission. If doing research, the nature, purpose and conditions of any research involving clinical material must be fully explained to the patient and informed consent must be obtained.
18. Registrants who take part in any media or other public event must exercise caution, particularly with regard to confidentiality.
19. All registrants must be covered by professional indemnity insurance.
20. Registrants must nominate two colleagues to hold a list of their patients and supervisees in confidence, in the event of death or an inability to work. The names of these nominees must be lodged with the constituent societies.

February 2011

Continuing Professional Development Policy

Introduction

Continuing professional development (CPD) has traditionally been part of the expectation of all psychoanalytic and psychodynamic psychotherapists. This has taken the form of an active scientific life and post qualifying stages of membership and a tradition of seeking the advice and consultation of experienced colleagues. Public expectation has now grown to require that all practitioners should maintain their practice through continuing development and that this should be monitored. The BPC and its Member Institutions welcome this development. In anticipation of statutory regulation the BPC has modified the basis of its register to incorporate CPD as a requirement of all registrants to provide evidence of a minimum standard of fitness to practise.

For psychoanalytic and psychodynamic psychotherapists continuing professional development consists of keeping up to date with current scientific and clinical developments and ensuring that their clinical sensitivity and objectivity remain on a level adequate for independent practice. The practice of psychoanalytic and psychodynamic psychotherapy is a private activity and continuing professional development seeks to maintain fitness to practise through clinical discussions with colleagues as well as study.

Definitions of the Registration Standard of Fitness to Practise

The fitness to practise standards, used as the requirement for inclusion in the Register of Clinical Practitioners, are as follows:

- that the practitioner has qualified under a BPC accredited training.
- that the practitioner is a member of good standing in their own professional institution which is a member organisation of BPC
- that the practitioner subscribes to and is governed by the BPC's published Code of Ethics
- that the practitioner is regulated by the BPC's Complaints Procedure
- that the practitioner has maintained an annual programme of continuing professional development, monitored and approved by the BPC, which includes consultation on their clinical work, attending lectures and courses and a broad range of professional activity.

Professional Standards Committee

The Professional Standards Committee is responsible for recommending CPD policy and procedures, subject to Executive approval. It is also responsible for making annual arrangements to enable members of institutions to register, undertaking an audit to ensure compliance and reviewing the policy and procedures.

The Chair of the Professional Standards Committee is appointed by the BPC Executive and is a senior member of one of the Member Institutions. The Committee consists of a representative from each member institution. The representatives act as advisors to their members and provide liaison with the Member Institution.

CPD Requirements

- Registrants are required to complete an annual declaration of CPD activity on the approved forms, countersigned by a colleague who has heard their clinical work being presented during the previous year.
- There is a minimum amount of CPD activity identified as 15 hours clinical learning for all registrants, plus an adequate amount of general activity, divided into four categories: continuing education; professional activity; self directed learning; and professional administration.
- The policy sets a minimum standard, but most psychotherapists will exceed the number of minimum hours, particularly in relation to some areas such as self directed learning.
- Clinical learning is based on the presentation of clinical practice which can either be in individual consultation with a colleague or in clinical workshops/ supervision. The latter can be in the form of a seminar with a senior colleague or a peer group. Either may be institutionally organised or privately arranged. No criteria, such as frequency of sessions, are set regarding the clinical work undertaken providing it is psychoanalytic or psychodynamic psychotherapy. Other forms of psychological or psychiatric practice are not included. It may, however, be private or institutional.
- The minimum standard of clinical learning does not require 15 hours of direct presentation, although that may be the case, but it does require some direct presentation and participation in clinical discussion in which clinical skills are demonstrated.
- The remaining hours are made up of a variety of other activities, spread across the categories and tailored to the registrant's particular needs. This is not an appraisal scheme but registrants should think ahead on an annual basis about areas that would benefit from further learning and development, perhaps with the help of another colleague or group of colleagues.
- The counter-signature should if at all possible be another BPC registrant otherwise an explanation of the registrant's circumstances is required. A counter-signature does not indicate professional comment or validation of the work presented. It is a statement confirming that the colleague was present. It is for this colleague to decide whether or not they wish to use their name in this way.
- Registrants should keep an ongoing record of their CPD and evidence that the activities have been undertaken, such as receipts, conference programmes etc. These may be required at the discretion of the Committee if the forms are audited.
- The Professional Standards Committee will conduct an audit of 5 per cent of the returns, randomly chosen, every year. The audit will involve the committee verifying that those selected have completed the submitted CPD activities in their return, through checking the documentation. The Professional Standards Committee must vouch for the full list of names to the BPC and these will be published in the following year's register.

- All newly qualified members are placed automatically on the register. A CPD return is then required on a pro rata basis to retain registration for the following year.
- If for any reason there has been a break in continuous clinical practice, the CPD standard required may be counted on a pro rata basis. If the break has been longer than one year and no CPD has been undertaken, then evidence will need to be provided of CPD plans for the coming year, particularly in respect of clinical learning. If CPD is undertaken during a break then this should be recorded and submitted with the re-registration application. A covering letter outlining the circumstances and CPD arrangements in place will be required in such cases and considered by the CPD Committee on an individual basis. Registrants may be re-instated in advance of resuming clinical practice if their CPD plans are satisfactory and will then be monitored when the subsequent return is submitted.
- If in an exceptional case there is any doubt concerning an individual's CPD record and their registration, this will first be discussed internally to the BPC. If necessary and with the individual's consent, the CPD record will be discussed with their Member Institution and proposals made to monitor CPD activities in the succeeding year. It remains open to the BPC to withdraw the member's name from the register, if there is doubt on the member's capacity to practice to a satisfactory standard and their CPD has not been maintained.

Note for overseas members

Registration to practice is a matter of national regulation. Each country sets up its own standards. This BPC scheme is voluntary, but is directed towards the UK situation. It therefore does not include members of Member Institutions who are resident and practising overseas. Overseas members will need to meet their own national criteria. However, they will continue to appear in the members' listing of the BPC Register, but not in the list of Clinical Practitioners which will be a UK based listing. Should members be abroad temporarily and wish to take up registration on their return, then the general recommendations on a break in practice apply.

Clinical Trustees

A Introduction

1. It is a requirement of the BPC's Code of Ethics that practicing psychotherapists appoint Clinical Trustees and that each year all members must lodge the details of their Clinical Trustees with the society to which they belong.

2. Paragraph 20 of the Code of Ethics states:

Registrants must nominate two colleagues to hold a list of their patients and supervisees in confidence, in the event of death or an inability to work. The names of these nominees must be lodged with the MIs.

3. Members must appoint two appropriate Clinical Trustees as this will allow flexibility in the event that one Clinical Trustee is unavailable.

4. Clinical Trustees would only become involved in the event that a therapist is for any reason unable to work.

B Appointment of Clinical Trustees

5. Two Clinical Trustees must be appointed and each made aware of the name and contact details of the other.

6. Therapists must think very carefully of the effect that their inability to work might have on a Clinical Trustee before nominating them. For example, it is inappropriate to appoint an immediate family member as a Clinical Trustee.

7. It is desirable that at least one of the Clinical Trustees be familiar with the therapist's clinical work, e.g. a member of a peer group.

8. Geographical location of Clinical Trustees should be borne in mind as they may have to see the therapist's patients in the event of their death or inability to work.

9. It is not advisable on qualification to choose as a Clinical Trustee someone who was in the same training year and who has also just recently qualified.

10. Unless there are good reasons, Clinical Trustees would normally be members of the BPC.

C The Role and Responsibilities of Clinical Trustees

11. The prime responsibility of Clinical Trustees is to ensure that patients, supervisees and trainees are informed of their options. To this end, the two Clinical Trustees should confer to work out a strategy for approaching the names on the therapist's list.

Other responsibilities might include:

- Offering to see them or arranging for other professional colleagues to do so.

- Providing the names of appropriate therapists or supervisors as relevant.
- Informing their MI's in the case of the death of the registrant.

12. In the event of their death to deal with the notes, files and other confidential material in a professional manner. This may involve destroying the material or passing it on to the relevant person within the MI, in accordance with the instructions of the therapist.

13. In any situation where difficulties arise in carrying out their role, the Clinical Trustee should enlist the help of the Ethics Committee of their Member Institution or the Ethics Committee of the BPC.

14. There may be occasions when a registrant is unable to work because of a sanction imposed by the BPC e.g. suspension, de-registration or where a registrant is non-compliant causing their fitness to practice to be called into question. At this point, the Clinical Trustee is obligated to hand over the registrant's list to the MI Ethics Chair; this may involve discussion between the Trustee and the Chair as to the best way forward e.g. who will contact those on the list. If the Clinical Trustee(s) is unwilling or feels it inappropriate to perform their role in these circumstances, there is an alternative procedure outlined in the Guidelines for Managing Sanctions document which should be followed.

D Responsibilities of the Therapist

15. To nominate a third party (family member or close friend) who would agree to hold the names of the two Clinical Trustees and to contact them as soon as possible in an emergency. To inform this person of the whereabouts of important confidential records.

16. To confirm in writing to each Clinical Trustee that they have been appointed and to ensure that these names are lodged with the MI and the immediate person who has knowledge of the whereabouts of their records.

17. To ensure that Clinical Trustees have access to the relevant details of the therapist's current practice and any other organisations that would need to be contacted. The list, which should be updated on a regular basis, should include the names, telephone numbers and days of the week seen of patients and supervisees. Therapists may want to include information as to whether a patient is at any particular risk.

E General

Sometimes therapists become unable to function professionally, but for any number of reasons are unaware of their position. It is therefore recommended that therapists, while in good health and in full control of their faculties, give their Clinical Trustees full instructions on how they would like such a situation to be handled in the unlikely event that it were to arise.
